Where can I buy the apps?

All apps are available either from the Mac App Store or directly from the developer's website. For the Mac App Store, the transaction is handled by Apple. For purchases made on the website, the transaction is handled by FastSpring (USA).

Mac App Store (recommended):

Direct Distribution (may be temporarily unavailable):

The demo versions that you have just downloaded here can be converted into a full version with their own registration key. This registration key will be sent to you by email immediately after purchase. App versions purchased from the Mac App Store do not require a registration key.

> Important: If you have tried a trial version and then want to purchase the full version from the Mac App Store, delete the trial version from your hard drive first. Sometimes the Mac App Store gets confused and thinks the app is already installed.

Do I have to pay for updates?

No. Updates are included for free in the purchase. But in some apps you can always donate a small amount of money to motivate future development.

Are there differences between the Mac App Store and website versions?

No. All apps ship with an identical feature set, whether purchased from the Mac App Store or from the developer's website. The versions do not differ and are given equal priority by the developer.

Can I use the other apps for free if I have bought one?

No. All apps are developed and distributed separately. Note, that you have not to pay for updates.

Are the apps compatible with Apple Silicon Macs?

Yes, starting with the release of macOS 11 Big Sur, the apps are available as Universal Binary and run natively on both architectures.
